INTERNET ACCEPTABLE USE POLICY

HISTORY: The Tigard Public Library offers public Internet access as part of its mission to provide resources that reflect the great diversity of interests and opinions in our community.

POLICY: Internet use will be managed in a manner consistent with the Library Use Guidelines, which are posted in the Library. Failure to use the Internet stations appropriately and responsibly may result in revocation of Internet use privileges, Library privileges and/or criminal prosecution.

BACKGROUND: As with other library resources, providing access to electronic information does not imply sponsorship nor endorsement by the Library. The Library does not monitor and has no control over the information viewed through the Internet and cannot be responsible for its content. Users are encouraged to take advantage of the Internet and to exercise good judgment and discretion. The Internet offers access to many valuable sources of information, but not all sites are accurate, complete, or current. There are many sites that carry information that you may think controversial or inappropriate. It is left to each user to choose what is individually appropriate and, as with other Library materials, parents or legal guardians are responsible for their minor children's use of the Internet.

RULES: Users should be aware that it is their responsibility to protect their privacy while using the Internet. Interactions involving personal information such as credit card numbers, home address and phone, etc. should be used with caution. Tigard Library and the City of Tigard are not responsible for sensitive or personal information transferred via the Internet on Library computers.
